ONE CHURCH ORGANIZED

Meetings at the Different
Churches Have Made About a Hundred Converts

The revival services which have been going on in the churches of this city for the past few weeks have resulted in about a hundred additions to the different churches and much interest has been manifested in each meeting.

Dr. Tevis did not preach a regular sermon last night at St. Paul's M. E. church. The services were devoted to an interesting experience meeting and many personal talks were made by the members. The meetings at this church will close Sunday evening.

Rev. Clark, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, preached an excellent discourse last evening on "The Rich Young Ruler," to an appreciative audience. The services at this church will close Sunday evening, when the pastor will preach on the subject, "Lost." Baptismal and communion services will be held Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The services at the Second M. E. church, which have been in progress for three weeks will continue indefinitely. Rev. Carroll, of Shelbyville, who is assisting the pastor, Rev. Carpenter, preached to a large audience last evening on "The Wise and Foolish Virgins." He will preach tonight on "The Good and Perfect Gift."

The meetings of the Missionary Baptists who organized a church in this city three weeks ago, still continue and are meeting with success. Rev. Fansion, of Crawfordsville, will reach the remainder of this week and the meetings will possibly continue next week. The church will build in the future and have a regular pastor. Sunday school is being organized and will be held in the assembly room for the present.

A series of revival meetings will begin at the First Presbyterian church on February 11th. The pastor, Rev. F. Cowling, will be assisted by two evangelists and a great meeting is anticipated.

ARLINGTON BOY'S EYEBALL BURSTED

Harry Andrews Suffers a Painful and Unfortunate Accident
Thursday

Henry Andrew, the fourteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Andrews, living at Arlington, met with most painful and unfortunate accident Thursday, while chopping wood.

While the unfortunate lad was chopping wood, one of the chips was thrown upward and struck him in the eyeball. The ball was bursted in such a condition that it was necessary to cut the ball from the eye socket today.

The lad suffered intense agony and will be compelled to go through life with only one eye. Dr. Shauck, of Arlington, attended his injuries.

There exists a wide variance in the price of corn as noted in the market reports of local papers over the State. At Bremen, Marshall county, the quotation last week was 60 cents per bushel. The local demand is supposed to create this difference in price.

One of the high school pupils was given a German promotion today—backwards by the back of the neck.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Brotherhood of the First Presbyterian church will have special services Sunday evening. Rev. J. F. Cowling will deliver an address on "The Heroes of Faith." Special music will be rendered at this service and it is hoped that every member of the church may hear this subject, and the public is cordially invited.

HOSS SWAPPING CAUSES TROUBLE

The First "David Harum" Case in the Rush Circuit Court

ANIMAL IS PARALYZED

And Cannot Stand up in its Stall
Without Assistance—Case was Appealed

One of the first cases in Rush county circuit court, coming under the new "David Harum Law," pertaining to horse swapping, has been appealed from the court of Squire Benjamin Richey, of Anderson township to the Rush circuit court.

Harmon W. Boles has filed suit against Robert J. Whaley, in which he alleges he was defrauded in horse trade.

The allegations were to the effect that Whaley had traded Boles a horse for a buggy, at which time the horse was supposed to be sound. It is claimed by the plaintiff that the horse was paralyzed in the back and cannot get up when he lies down without assistance.

A judgment was rendered against Whaley for $97.80 in Squire Richey's court and he appealed the case.

ASSESSORS WILL LOOK AFTER STOCK

Especial Attention will be Paid to the Valuation of Live Stock

When the township assessors are given their annual instructions by the county assessor this year, attention will be called to two important changes in the rules of assessment that have been made by the State Board of Tax Commissioners. All grain will be assessed on its market value, March 1. Especial care must be exercised in placing values upon live stock, as the lists prepared by the assessors are to be received as court evidence in the future. The books that will be used by the Rush county assessors are now being prepared at the office of the county auditor and will be in readiness before the time arrives to begin the work.

Especial attention will be paid to the valuation of live stock as the result of a recent decision of the Appellate Court. It has been a universal custom for owners to increase the value of live stock killed by traction or steam railroad cars manifold for the purpose of bringing suit. In the future the assessor's list is to be taken into consideration as legal evidence. The Appellate Court holds that a tax list, sworn to by the property listed is evidence against him as to the value of the property.

MANY HAVE SEEN ARMLESS GHOST

Weird Appearing Specter
Chases People from Old
Mill Ruins

MURDER COMMITTED THERE

Is the Story Told Now—Stranger
Was Robbed and Killed by Local Thugs

Ever so often in every community, for some inexplicable reason, a revival of ghost stories is started. Rushville is now in the throes of such a revival. The new ghost that has been added to the long list of local supernatural apparitions is a hideous looking affair and is in a class of its own. Several people have reported seeing it in the vicinity of the old Carmichael mill ruins between the hours of twelve and four o'clock in the morning. It is described as being attired in the conventional ghost apparel—white—but it has no arms, and two bleeding stubs at the arm pits bears the marks of the phantom having met with an accident.

The shadowy semblance is possessed with remarkable agility, being an athlete of the highest type. It is said by some who have seen it that the armless spirit gave chase taking long steps clearing the street at one step. One fellow declares that he saw it one night last week and that when he ran the specter came after him covering an entire half block in just exactly five steps.

Already a story of how and why the ghost is there has been concocted in the fertile imagination of someone who had little else to do. It is said that on the night of the fire a murder was committed. A party who had been visiting in this city was enticed to the old mill and robbed and killed. To cover up the crime the place was set on fire. And now that the world may get an inkling of the dastardly deed, the phantom makes nightly parades to incite attention.

The colored men who work at the race track and who are obliged to cross a foot bridge near the old mill ruins now take to the pike, going around at least a half mile out of their way.

One of the "swipes" at the track, who does not believe in ghosts, tells a harrowing tale of an experience he had recently. One night when returning from a carousal around town he crossed the bridge, whistling and in the best of spirits and nearing a low fence just across the field he saw two long, black arms frantically waving for him to go back. He retreated without much ado and with much haste. (Although, as previously stated, he did not believe in ghosts.) After a great deal of thought, when he had flanked around to the extreme right, he came to the sad realization that the only place he had to sleep was beyond the grim, beckoning arms, so in sheer desperation he walked to the other end of the fence and nearly fell over in faint from laughter when he saw that the two arms were not the dismembered part of the mill ghost, but were the two long ears belonging to a jackass which stood on the other side of the fence.

One of the grooms at the track said that if the armless ghost was a "for-sure-enough" one and he ever saw it he was going to find other employment. He declared he did not believe the murder story and when asked how he accounted for the ghost not having any arms he replied: "I guess he shot them off shooting craps."

Moscow Hermit Found to be Insane, was Given a Real Treat

UNDER POOR FARM ETHICS

Tom Worthington, Who has Charge of Turkish Bath, Performs the Operation

Perry Virtue, the old hermit found in a pitiable condition in his old hut near Moscow, was examined by an insanity commission in Squire Benjamin Richey's court in Millroy yesterday and found to be insane. The recluse was removed to the county poor farm, east of this city, and there subjected to a treat which he had never experienced in the twenty-eight years of life which he lived alone.

At the poor farm there are a set of rules and ethics which govern the society there. One of these is that above all things cleanliness must remain on the throne. Seth Kelso, who has happily been dubbed "Dr. Dippy," having charge of the insane ward, has a valued assistant in the Honorable T. W. Worthington, known to every small boy in this community as "Coom Skin" and Copperbottom. Tom is an expert masseur, barber and Turkish bath rubber, and every new inmate is given a thorough "going-over" before they are given the right hand of fellowship.

Virtue was no exception. Upon his arrival he was placed under Tom's care and the long gray matted locks and flowing beard were cut off, the first time in over thirty years. His boots were shined—the first time since the cost tag was pulled off—and his clothes pressed and put in good condition. No one would know Virtue now: very few people new him before.

TWO MORE HORSES FOR HARRIE JONES

Nearly Every State in the Union is Represented in His Big Stable

Harrie Jones received two horses today to add to his big stable of trotters and pacers. One is Ashspring, by Ashland Wilkes, a green trotter owned by E. B. Adams & Son, of Racine, Wisconsin, that has been a mile in 2:30½. The other horse is Wilton, 2:20½, by Wilton, that has showed a trial mile in 2:10½. This animal is owned by W. D. Adams, Jr., of Lynchburg, Virginia. Both are stabled at Riverside park.

OLD FLAME MALICIOUSLY STARTED FALSE REPORT

The report that Miss Lottie Beeler, daughter of Sam Beeler, of West First street, was married to Mr. Carl Schmalfeltz, of Indianapolis, is said to be untrue by Miss Beeler. It is thought that a former suitor for Miss Beeler's hand, and a rival of Mr. Schmalfeltz, maliciously started the report.

PRISON TO HAVE A DAILY PAPER

Jeffersonville Reformatory
the First Institution in the World to Have One

CLEAN AND WELL EDITED

No Railroad Time Tables, Stock
Exchange or Market Reports
Will be Published

One of the cleanest newspapers, both typographically and editorially, published in the State is the "Reflector," heretofore a weekly publication, but beginning yesterday as a daily paper. It is published in the Jeffersonville reformatory, and the prisoners adapted for newspaper work are responsible for the paper.

In the initial copy of the Daily Reflector, the following editorial appears:

"The management believes that the presentation of this issue of the Daily Reflector to the inmates of the institution will be appreciated. So far as we know, it is the first attempt to publish a daily newspaper in an institution of this character. We hope it may be the means of helping the men of the institution to profitably pass the many lonesome hours of their confinement. The purpose of the paper is three-fold. First: The main object will be to interest, educate, and keep its readers in touch, as closely as possible in its limited space, with the outside world. Second: We purpose to run a serial story, publishing a portion each day—(The Fighting Chance is the first story to appear). The stories will be selected from high class fiction or history, with a view to occupy the mind of the reader, thus breaking, in a degree, the monotony of institutional life. Third: To give employment to the men who are assigned to the printing department. The paper will contain no quotations on the New York stock exchange, no railroad time tables, no prices on hogs or potatoes. Neither will it print any news pertaining to the institution. (But, at all times, its columns will contain clean readable matter which will be of lasting benefit to the man who is sufficiently interested to read it. We hope that the experiment of printing a daily in this institution will be a success; so much so that other institutions may follow in our footsteps. Nothing is more helpful to a man who is alone than something interesting to read. This is truer, in our judgment, in an institution than anywhere else. While the issuing of this paper entails some little added expense upon the management, nevertheless we believe that the benefits to be derived by its readers will many times offset the cost.

Samuel R. Newhouse had a fine horse to break its leg Thursday. A veterinary surgeon was called and an attempt will be made to save the animal's life.

MAKE LOVE ON ROLLER SKATES

"Rinkulating" is the New
"Rinkle" Revised from Memory's Attic

THE OLD GUFFIN RINK

Is Brought Back to Mind by a
with Age

How many of us there are, who are brought back to those highly colored halcyon days of the old skating rinks in Rushville, when we see the younger people of today hurrying away, skates under their arm to the rink for the evening. How many pleasant recollections are brought back to mind when we recall to mind some pleasant event at the old Guffin rink when that institution meant as much to this community as the great Hippodrome means to New Yorkers in this day.

From an old diary kept by a man in those early days of roller skates, bustles and hoop skirts, we print the following story:

And it came to pass, there came a day when the young man with the lead pencil legs and high water pants bethought himself of the skating rink.

So he went out, and when he came nigh unto his girl he spake unto her saying: "Come Mary, let us gird ourselves up and go thence to the rink, for behold I have been diligent in thy absence and have embezzled two coupons." So they went, one with the other, for they loved each other with love, the greatness of which was like unto death.

And when the youth and maiden were come unto the rink, they saw divers other young men and maidens waltzing hither and thither, and standing upon their necks and spreading themselves upon the four corners of the place.

And Mary was pleased thereat, for she saw the other maidens sticking to their escorts closer than boiler rivets. And she longed for some of the same agony.

So she prevailed upon her lover to go and do likewise. And he went with a light heart, for he loved the sport because he had not been there before and knew the whiteness thereof.

And after a little while he returned and took Mary's feet and fastened the skates thereon. And in like manner did he unto his own feet. Then they smiled one upon the other and went upon their wobbly way.

And it came to pass when they got where the eyes of the multitude were upon them, Mary forgot herself and looked back. Now this was a grievous thing to do, for it was written on the wall: "Thou shalt not look back when thou skatest, lest thy feet forsake thee and thou treadest upon thine ear."

But Mary was full of joy and chocolate caramels and remembered not these things.

So when she looked back her feet flew from under her, and went up into the atmosphere and cut a star therein, and descended with a great crash, and Mary sat down on the floor with a dull thud, so that her bustle escaped and came out at the neck of her dress. And her fall was exceedingly hard; yea great was the muchness thereof.

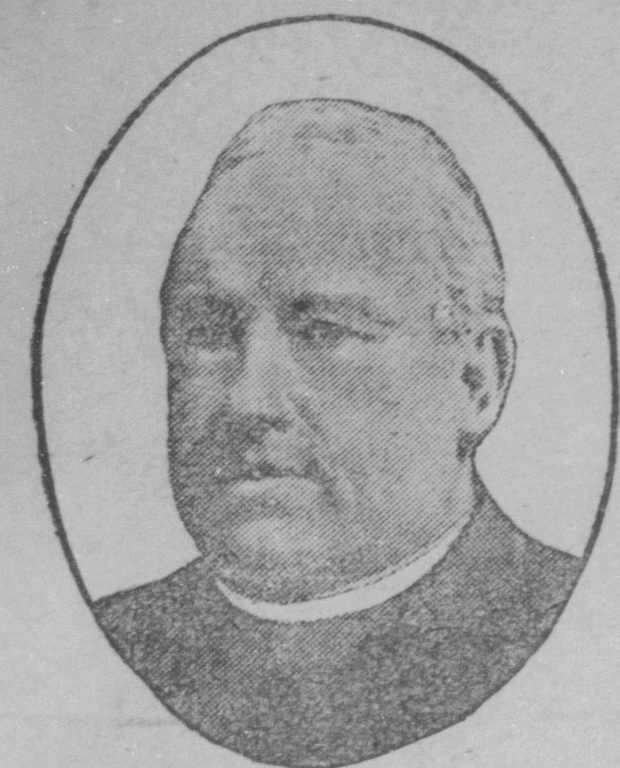

So likewise had her lover spilled himself, but he hurt himself not, for he had been like the seven wise skaters who had put cork soles in the basement of his trousers.

But in an evil moment he saw Mary's bustle about her neck, and he lifted up his voice and laughed and asked her, from whence came the chaff bag.

Then was Mary wroth and she grew red in the countenance and answered, saying: "Thou leadest me in slippery paths and when the floor riseth up and striketh me in a grievous place, thou comest not to my aid; yea verily, thou gurglest at my misfortune. Henceforth we will remain together a little closer off."

And from that day unto this she passeth him by on the other side of the avenue.

HALF A CENTURY OF SUCCESS

When the Reverend Father John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., recommended to his parishioners and friends the prescription that had restored him to health and strength, the people named it Father John's Medicine, and so it became known and was advertised, with his knowledge and approval. The prescription of an eminent specialist, it is pure and wholesome, and free from poisonous narcotics or nerve deadening drugs in any form—not a patent medicine. Its power to make strength and build up the body explains why it has been so successful for fifty years in curing colds and all throat and lung troubles. For sale by F. E. Wo. cott.

Disastrous End of Dr. Reitman's
"Hunger March" at Chicago.

THE POLICE GOT BUSY

Chief Shippy Was Taking No Chances on Having a Repetition of Berlin Riots.

His Men Quickly Put to Rout
an Incipient Socialistic Demonstration.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—At an attempt of the Socialists to bring about a "march of the unemployed" through the downtown streets yesterday afternoon resulted in two sharp fights with the police in which the would-be marchers were routed after a number of men had been clubbed. Dr. Benjamin L. Reitman, the originator of the plan to march through the streets, and two of his followers were arrested.

For several days Reitman, who is a Socialist, had been making announcements of his intention to hold a parade of "hoboes" and "unemployed" despite the warning given him by Chief of Police Shippy, that no march through the streets would be permitted. Reitman, however, continued to defy the authorities, and Wednesday night thousands of circulars were distributed through the downtown saloons and in the lodging-house district calling upon all men out of work to assemble at 2 o'clock on the lake front. The chief of police early in the day reiterated his statement that the march would not be permitted, and directed that all the police force be held in reserve at the various stations.

At a few minutes before 2 o'clock a crowd commenced to gather on Michigan avenue in front of the Art Institute, and in a few minutes a column which was really a series of bunches of four and five men was formed and, headed by Reitman, they started. The marchers proper did not number more than 200 at any time, but many hundreds of people followed them along the sidewalks and added to the confusion.

After marching a block west on Adams street, Reitman counter-marched to Michigan avenue, passed north to Madison street and then marched west two squares to Madison street. Here he encountered a strong squad of police under the command of Assistant Chief of Police Schuetler, who after a command to disband had been disregarded, ordered his men to charge the marchers. The police came on a run and the column was instantly broken up. Several men were knocked down and the police, not attempting to make arrests, used their clubs freely in quickening the footsteps of the fleeing "unemployed."

Followed closely by the officers, the marchers darted into the crowd of shoppers along State street, and several women were pushed to the sidewalk during the confusion. No arrests were made and nobody was seriously injured, although the police dealt vigorous thumps with their clubs on the backs of the marchers.

A number of the marchers after getting away from the police, went south in State street, attempting to form another column as they went. At State street and Jackson boulevard they had formed the semblance of another parade and, taking the middle of the boulevard, they marched along, six abreast. Just before reaching Clark street they were met by another detachment of police under Lieutenants White and Mooney. Another order to disperse met with no response, the marchers attempting to shoulder their way along. The police instantly charged, swinging their clubs right and left. The marchers fled wildly, some of them running into the doorway of the Union League club, while others sought safety within the post-office building. Reitman turned south in Clark street, but was quickly caught and placed under arrest. He showed some fight and was handled in vigorous style. His hat was smashed by a blow from a policeman's club, he was knocked down and his clothing torn. When he regained his feet he shouted: "Let me go, let me go; I know the chief of police." He was at once taken to police headquarters, followed by a crowd of 2,000 people. After reaching the station Reitman said: "I was arrested without cause, and was treated brutally. Some policeman hit me over the head with his club. There would have been no disorder if the police had allowed us to march through the streets as we wished to do. All we wanted was to go to the city hall and demand that men out of work be given employment by the city."

As soon as it was known that fighting had taken place in the streets, Chief of Police Shippy called in the reserves from the nearby stations and within a few minutes the central police station was filled with officers. Their services, however, were not needed. Later in the afternoon another crowd gathered on the lake front, but it was broken up by a few officers sent for the purpose by the chief of police. Nobody was seriously hurt during the excitement, although some of the marchers will have sore eyes and backs for a few days. Many of them seemed to regard the whole thing as a huge joke until they came in contact with the police.

Reitman and two of his followers who were arrested at the same time as he will be arraigned on charges of disorderly conduct and inciting a riot.

ECONOMY URGED

Chairman Tawney Tells Congress a Few Very Urgent Facts.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The urgent deficiency appropriation bill occupied the attention of the house to the exclusion of all other business. A surprise was sprung when Chairman Tawney of the appropriations committee warned the members that the country was confronted with the certainty of a $100,000,000 deficit unless the estimates for the next fiscal year should be cut down materially. A discussion on tariff revision was injected into the proceedings, during which the leaders on both sides of the house tried to commit one another to a definite announcement as to whether if successful at the November election there would be tariff legislation.

Senator Stone of Missouri presented statistics of government deposits in national banks to show that the distribution of money during the recent currency stringency was not "equitable" as contemplated by the law governing the treasury department. He declared that the North and South were discriminated against, while New York and Boston were favored. His speech was on his resolution pending in the senate directing a committee to investigate and report the facts in these transactions.

Senator Fuller followed with brief comment on the action of the secretary of the treasury, declaring that the placing of money in New York city during the panic was fully justified. He paid a high tribute to the rich men who, he said, had promptly offered practically their entire capital in order to stem the tide of disaster in that city, which threatened the whole country. The senate devoted the latter part of the session to the consideration of the bill to revise the criminal code; and adjourned until Monday.

AN AMIABLE DESIGN

The Massacre of Americans Was to Be Revolutionists' First Step.

Havana, Jan. 24.—The trial of General Masso Parra and others implicated with him in the alleged conspiracy against the government is in progress here. Captain J. A. Ryan of the Fifteenth cavalry and Captain Jones gave testimony tending to show that Parra's intention was to blow up the buildings, massacre the Americans and overthrow the provisional government. Captain Jones testified that the negroes in Pinar del Rio who fought for the revolutionists were dissatisfied and determined to go to any extent to secure the recognition of the colored race.

The testimony given showed that the conspiracy embraced members of all political parties, the color line being clearly marked. Witnesses for the defense probably will be heard tomorrow.

Governor Magoon left today on a visit to Governor Lecuona of Matanzas. He will return here on Sunday, and will leave for the United States on Monday, in response to a call from the president for an intimate discussion of present conditions on the island.

May Dock Prince's Wages.

Berlin, Jan. 24.—The Socialists in retaliation for the stand taken by Prince Von Buelow on the matter of manhood suffrage for Prussia, have decided to aim a blow direct at the imperial chancellor. When the appropriation for the chancellor's salary comes up for debate in the reichstag they will introduce a motion that his remuneration be reduced unless he promises a bill providing universal suffrage without distinction of sex for everybody over twenty years of age.

"Expert" Testimony Limited.

New York, Jan. 24.—There seems no longer any doubt that next week will bring the second hearing of the Thaw trial to a close. Justice Dowling has decided to limit each side to three expert witnesses. Two of the defense's trier have already been heard.

The General Demand of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

Do you have that dark brown taste in your mouth every morning when you awake? If so, you are bilious and should take two or three of those little BLOOD LIVER PILLS, easy to take, never sicker weaker or gripe, sent mailed by The Bloodline Corporation, Boston, Mass.

Verdict at Indianapolis Held Ferger

Boys Who Bought the Stuff Became Involved In Quarrel In Which
One Was Killed.

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—A jury in superior court returned a verdict in favor of Louis Loscent against Edward and Charles Ferger. The amount of the verdict was $700. Loscent sued the Fergers, who operate the Terminal pharmacy, Market and Illinois street, for $5,000, alleging that Otto Ferger, a younger brother of the defendants and a clerk in the store, had, on Christmas day, 1905, sold to George F. Loscent, sixteen years of age, a bottle of wine and that that bottle of wine had made his son, William McKnight and Leon Thompson drunk. In a quarrel that ensued, McKnight shot and killed the Loscent boy.

The suit was brought against the Fergers on the ground that the illegal sale of the wine was the proximate cause of young Loscent's death.

TO EASE HIS MIND

State's Witness Voluntarily Returns to Face the Court.

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—The joint trial of David and Fred Graves, charged with the murder of Herbert Murphy on Aug. 4, 1906, is on in criminal court. The selection of a jury was finished in less than an hour. Neil Griffin, chief witness for the state, who fled from Indianapolis with the Graves boys after the killing of Murphy, only recently returned to this city. The Graves boys had been returned here several months ago, Dave being found in Cleveland and Fred in Detroit. All three of the boys—none of them yet twenty-five—had been wandering over the country, principally through the West and South, since the killing of Murphy.

Griffin's story of the killing was short. He said that he was with the Graves boys in the City Club saloon in West Market street, across from the Terminal building, on the night of Aug. 4. Murphy was in the saloon also. All of the boys had been drinking and Murphy and Griffin quarreled over a game of pool. The Graves boys sided with Griffin and at the suggestion of one of the boys they went to an alley back of the saloon, to "have it out." Murphy and Griffin were to do the fighting, but as they left the saloon Fred Graves, according to Griffin, hit Murphy on the head with the butt end of a billiard cue. The blow caused concussion of the brain, from which Murphy died a short time later.

Griffin testified that he and the Graves boys had left the city at once, walking about twelve miles westward, then taking a train for Terre Haute. From there they went south and west, and in the year and a half they were away from this city traveled over most of the country between Pittsburg and Kansas City. They left a town as soon as they saw there anyone who knew them, Griffin said.

By their dodging tactics they kept away from police of all the cities they visited until they got in the Great Lakes region. There they stopped going together, and it was after the breaking up of the trio that the Graves brothers were arrested and brought back to Indianapolis. Griffin testified that he came back because he knew he had not had anything to do with the actual killing of Murphy, and he wished to "get what was coming to him and get it off his mind."

Former Cashier on Trial.

Jasper, Ind., Jan. 24.—Charles Behrens, accused of embezzling $25,000 of the funds of the People's State bank of Huntington, while serving as cashier, is now on trial in the circuit court of this county. Thus far the testimony has been largely confined to records of the bank. The first witness was Philip Dilly, former recorder of the county. Two hundred witnesses have been subpoenaed and the trial will exhaust ten days and more.

Says He Can Prove Alibi.

Cambridge City, Jan. 24.—Earl Dubois of Milton is being detained by the authorities on suspicion that he has knowledge of the murder of Joseph Lucy, an aged man, who lived south of Milton, a year ago. The detention is due to statements by Will Henry, living near Milton, who has been in jail for five months, accused of shooting at his wife. Dubois says that he has no knowledge of the tragedy, and that he can prove an alibi.

Aged Ministers Homeless.

Evansville, Ind., January 24.—The Thornton Home for Aged Ministers of the Presbyterian church, a large institution near this city, burned with its contents shortly before the noon hour yesterday. All the inmates were rescued, some of them with difficulty. A defective flue was probably at fault.

NIPPED IN THE BUD

Abortive Attempt to Overthrow Monarchy and Proclaim Portugal a Republic.

TO ASSASSINATE PREMIER

First Step in Coup d'Etat Was to Get the Head of Franco Safely Tucked Away Some Place.

While Court Was Holding Forth Merrily at a Ball the Revolution Was to Be Touched Off.

Lisbon, Jan. 24.—An abortive attempt to overthrow the monarchy and proclaim Portugal a republic was nipped in the bud last night by the prompt action of the government. The plot was organized by a small group of advanced Republicans. As near as can be ascertained, the plan was to assassinate Premier Franco and then depend for success upon street risings, supported by secret republican and labor organizations, armed with bombs and revolvers.

The conspirators intended to take advantage of various festivities to carry out the coup d'etat. The royal family were at Villa Vicosa entertaining the Duke of the Abruzzi. Most of the army and navy officers who were in the city were attending a gala performance at the theater, while many of the chief functionaries of state were present at a magnificent ball at one of the legations.

The police discovered what was in the wind early in the evening and surrounded and raided a house where the ringleaders in the plot were conferring. When they broke in the doors the lights were extinguished and in the confusion that ensued most of the conspirators managed to make their escape. Several of them, however, were captured, including the leader, Joao Chagras, a republican journalist, who was prominent in the republican revolt of 1891; Franca Borger, editor of O'Mundo, and a merchant by the name of Grendella. A case of revolvers and bombs was found in the cellar. A general alarm was immediately sent out and while the prisoners were being taken to jail troops began to appear from all directions. A squadron of cavalry was placed around Premier Franco's house and the night passed without further incident.

From papers captured it was evident that the conspiracy was badly organized and premature. Chagras, the leader, has always been an active revolutionary. After the revolt in 1891 he escaped to Brazil and subsequently being pardoned by amnesty, returned to Portugal. As the details of the plot are in the hands of the police, other arrests are expected.

Premier Franco has established a rigorous censorship, so that details of the conspiracy may not be learned abroad. Outside of Lisbon, no disturbances are reported. The peaceful section of the republicans, headed by Bernardino Machado, apparently is in no way implicated in the affair. The government organ, Diario Illustrado, today printed a warning that agitators against public order would be treated as criminals and the enemies of society.

Students on a Rampage.

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—An effort upon the part of the sophomores of the University of Pennsylvania to break up the annual class dinner of the Freshmen last night, precipitated an incident in Kuehler's fashionable restaurant, in the course of which nearly $500 worth of damage was done by the students. A riot call was sent in and ninety policemen were hurried out to quell the disturbance. A number of students were beaten by the police and half a dozen were arrested. The sophomores swept the banquet board of all dishes and decorations, and in the skirmish that followed every window in the banquet room was broken.

Croatians Send Millions Home.

CANINE POLICE SQUAD

Duties to Be Performed by New York's Dog Cops.

TO PATROL POSTS WITH MEN.

Clever Animals Taught to Trip Up Suspicious Persons on the Run. They Know Bad Men From Good Nearly Every Time.

If you are running for a car in the Bronx section of New York at 3 o'clock in the morning and a muzzled dog looking like a cross between a collie and a bull terrier barks at you, one of the best things to do is to stop. You will stop anyway, willy nilly, and probably at the cost of a bruised shin, for the dog belongs to the new canine police squad, and the first thing he does when he sees a suspicious looking person on the run is to dash in between his legs and send him on his collar bone. This is because it's the first rule in the code book of the new canine patrol squad No. 1, N. Y. P. D., says the New York Sun.

The new squad of police dogs is fully trained, and there always will be this insurance against their biting a piece out of a respectable citizen under the impression that he is a second story man—they can't. Each doggie cop is so muzzled that he can drink water, bark vehemently and have his nose petted, but cannot eat poisoned meat from some false friend, inadvertently chew up the pillars of society or accept bologna from a butcher who wants to keep open after hours.

The dogs have been in training for their duties since they were brought over from Ghent, Belgium, a few months ago. These dogs of this half collie half mastiff breed have been used in police work for years with good results. Third Deputy Commissioner Arthur Woods determined to get some dogs to use in the outlying precincts of New York to fight the summer epidemics of attacks on children and help out the police with the long beats all the year around.

He at first thought of bloodhounds, but these did not seem practicable. At the suggestion of Robert L. Bacon, a son of the assistant secretary of state, Mr. Woods sent Lieutenant George R. Wakefield over to Belgium to look at the police dogs of Brussels, Ghent and other cities. Wakefield liked the methods of Ghent best, bought four Ghent puppies and an English Alredale to experiment with and brought them over. Since then three policemen have been having the time of their lives playing with the doggies. Wakefield and Patrolmen Charles Beerman and Miles McDonald are the lucky cops whose daily job has been to go to South Washington park and train five frolicsome pups how to be good policemen. One of the Belgians quickly showed that he would never make a cop and was stricken from the probationary list.

The squad have been taught one thing at a time. First came obedience to orders like "Come to heel," "After him, boy," and the like. Next came knowing a policeman in uniform and always working with the uniform. More difficult than this was learning to distinguish a policeman's whistle from other whistles. Now the dogs will pick out a policeman's every time and run in his direction.

Another accomplishment these four footed Dogberys are now up on is that of paying no more attention to a fusillade of revolver bullets than a tried retriever pays to a volley of bird shot. The highwayman test is another one. The part of the highwayman is taken by the man who has been feeding the dogs and with whom ordinary dogs would be friendly.

Strange cop walks up, with Fido cop trotting obediently at heels. Out springs Mr. Highwayman and falls upon strange cop. Fido cop realizes at once that it is a case of being true to either duty or his dinner. Hesitate? Not he. One glance at the blue uniform of his friend, and to his assistance he flies. Mr. Highwayman naturally is soon down and out. What would happen if the quondam highwayman failed to perform his function of handing out dinner the next time the Fido cop and he met was not revealed at police headquarters.

The dogs will be sent out with individual policemen, the man holding his partner in leash. When in the middle of his beat, which the dog has already been made familiar with so that he knows it as a beat of his own, doggie is released and chases himself on his duties. He scours fields and runs through alleys, has a look at cellar doors, and when he sees anything suspicious barks like a good fellow. The cop runs up, and they investigate. If he sees any one running in a suspicious manner, the dog jumps right in, trips up the runner and stands byaving over him until the officer comes up.

Three of the four Belgians are named Nogi, Max and Donner. The fourth, for reasons, is named Lady. In the gossip of the police department is an item to the effect that Lady will soon add somewhat to the number of Belgian dog cops. Dogs young enough to train for New York uses cost $10 apiece in Belgium, and it costs $10 more to bring them here. So Lady's pups will be worth at least $20 apiece to the department and at no added outlay to the police appropriation.

The fifth dog, the English one, is called Jim. In many ways he is the liveliest of the lot. If the experiment with the dogs succeeds and they do not bowl over too many middle aged respectabilities who are running for trolleys or the doctor, future squads will probably be largely composed of English Alredales like Jim.

In Belgium the newspapers left by travelers in railway cars are collected (about 263,000 pounds a year) and used in the manufacture of pulp for making a certain quality of cardboard.

ACT QUICKLY

Delay Has Been Dangerous in Rushville

Do the right thing at the right time. Act quickly it times of danger. Backache is kidney danger. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. Cure all distressing, dangerous kidney ills.

Plenty of evidence to prove this. Mrs. W. A. Wylie, 1029 N. Sexton Street, Rushville, Ind., says:

"My husband had typhoid fever and after recovering found that his kidneys were left in a weakened condition. The secretions from his kidneys passed too frequently and caused him to rise many times during the night. His back was lame and ached a great deal and he suffered from frequent headaches. When he saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, he procured a box at F. B. Johnson & Company drug store. They quickly corrected the urinary trouble and his back has almost regained its former strength. The pain has left and I have not heard him complain of a backache since. He thinks highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and we are pleased to recommend them to other sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, JANUARY 24, 1908

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 24.—It has developed that new indictments in the asphalt patching cases are to be presented to the grand jury for consideration before it adjourns for the month. The adjournment will probably be tomorrow—perhaps not until Monday of next week. The indictments, which will be complete before they are taken to the grand jury room, are being prepared by Elliott R. Hooton, prosecuting attorney, and John S. Duncan, special prosecutor in the asphalt cases. Attorneys for Henry Marshall, Harry Brunaugh, George W. Baxter, Thomas Shufelton and John Rosasco, all now under indictment for complicity in the asphalt patching frauds, have been particularly anxious during the last few days to have one of the cases set for trial. It has been announced that Feb. 10 is the date on which the first trial will probably start, but none of the asphalt cases has yet been put on the criminal court calendar. Mr. Hooton has been asked many times why he has not yet set down at least one of the cases for trial. He has never given a definite answer about his delay. It has transpired that the delay is caused by waiting until new indictments can be returned and that a definite date for trial of the first case will probably not be given until such indictments are returned or until the grand jury refuses to return them. It has been definitely announced by Mr. Hooton that the trial of Harry Brunaugh, former superintendent of asphalt repaving under the Western Construction company, will be held before any other trial in the asphalt cases. It is probable that that trial will start on the date practically agreed on—Feb. 10.

It is almost a certainty that the United Mine Workers will not formulate any wage demands this week or before the soft coal operators come to Indianapolis next week and decide whether or not they will meet the miners in a joint wage conference. The indications that a joint wage conference will not immediately follow the miners' convention and possibly not be held in Indianapolis at all are also stronger than at the first of the week, when such an outcome of the operators' meeting in Indianapolis next week to decide whether they will rehabilitate the joint relations disrupted two years ago was predicted. An indicated in a summary of the situation at that time, the warm weather has cut down the domestic coal demand and the industrial depression the steam coal demand. The bituminous operators would just as soon have the market stimulated for a few weeks by the uncertainty of a shut-down of the mines April 1, when the present scale expires. There is, however, underlying all this a more difficult problem. The Illinois operators are still obdurate. In the settlement of the long fight and series of strikes in 1897, they were limited to a single mining standard, requiring that all mining in that state be on the screen basis, while Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania mine either screen or run of mine. Also a differential of 7 cents between pick and machine mining has been established in that state. In recent years machines have been introduced into Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania to such an extent that much of the coal is now mined by machinery. The Illinois operators assert that the Indiana operators have a full 3 cents competitive advantage over them on every ton of coal so mined, but do not protest so much against this alleged inequality as to what they assert is a full 8 cents a ton advantage that the Ohio and western Pennsylvania operators have on machine-mined coal. They demand that before they will agree to enter another joint movement with the operators and miners of western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana that these alleged discriminations be corrected. In other words, they wish the entire competitive schedule revised.

The suit filed by the Eclectic Medical college of this city against the state anatomical board to compel the latter to furnish the college with dissecting material, will probably be dismissed when it is called before Judge Allen in circuit court. The board has sent the college a subject for dissection, and Dr. F. M. Wright said that this removed the reason for the suit. Several days ago the state board of medical examination and registration refused to recognize the college or its graduates, the reason given being that the students were not doing any dissecting. The college then sued the state anatomical board to obtain subjects, as provided by law, alleging that it had been discriminated against in the distribution of such subjects.

CURRENT COMMENT

A Bit of Sea Romance.

It was a fortunate escape which the 800 passengers on board the liner Mount Royal had when they made port after tossing about for four weeks in wintry seas. Twenty-eight days unseen and unsignaled was the record, and after vainly battling with the waves, which strained and disabled the boilers, the ship took the back track to gain the nearest land.

The speed and regularity attained by ocean steamers make the record of the Mount Royal unusual. In the days of clipper ships a few weeks' delay in making port gave no cause for alarm. There were fewer ships then on the course, and the fact that a straying ship was not sighted had no significance. Few passenger steamers on the Atlantic remain unaccounted for. Three years ago the Huronian, bound on a winter voyage and carrying forty-nine people, vanished from human ken. The Naronic was lost in the winter of 1893 and the Georgia in March, 1897. The fate of these two ships has never been cleared up. And yet it is possible that tidings of the disasters which met them will come in some strange way. The Anchor line steamer Republic, from New York to Glasgow, disappeared in April, 1869, and more than twenty years afterward a sailor in the Hospital For the Insane in Liverpool recovered his mind and stated that he was on board the Republic and that she struck an iceberg in the mid-Atlantic and sank immediately. He had been picked up at sea by a passing vessel, but was unable to give an account of himself.

A Flag With a History.

The flag of the gallant war frigate Chesapeake, which was hauled down after the brave Lawrence fell, is a souvenir of defeat, but the sight of it is calculated to stir the American heart. It is believed that this flag is among the relics preserved by an eccentric Englishman, and the proposal to secure it for preservation here is timely. The heroic deeds of our old navy have been told in story, but it is only of recent years that the nation has come to realize the vital importance of the work done by the old wooden ships. Sea power meant something then too.

The immortal words of Lawrence, "Don't give up the ship!" can never fade from our cherished traditions, but with the flag which waved over the hero when he spoke them as he lay fatally wounded on display here the story will be given a present day interest. The ship Chesapeake was destroyed by the captors. Even a bit of one of her timbers would be worth preserving as a relic, and the flag was as much of a factor in her glorious career as one of her guns. By all means let the tattered ensign be preserved in the land where it belongs, and where it will be fitly honored.

War Alarm Waves.

Until "Fighting Bob" Evans gets back in Hampton Roads we must expect war alarms to come across the Atlantic by wireless and cable without ceasing and also without sense. Sensationalism in the war rumor line has its headquarters in Europe, and the yellowest of our native news "fakers" could go to school there and be shown that Americans are babies at the business.

Generally the rumors of war start in Paris, and the newspaper offices of the world are deluged with "inside" information supposed to leave no doubt that Japan is sharpening its sword for battle. Then Tokyo or St. Petersburg or the Philippines will be used later as an outpost to give a touch of genuineness to the alarming report. Any old canard is made to do duty in this work of keeping the war idea to the fore.

An unofficial estimate places at about 8,000,000 the number of telephones now in use in the world. This aggregate has been reached in a little over thirty years. Modern business would stagger for a season if the "hello" instrument was to drop suddenly from availability.

Now the coinage of the new gold pieces will have to stop because there is not enough room for 1908 in Roman numerals. Most of us are willing to accept them with any old date on them.

CONGRESSMAN JAMES E. WATSON

Congressman James E. Watson, of Rushville, the Sixth district candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, was born in Winchester, Randolph county, Indiana, forty-three years ago, and received his education in the public schools of Winchester and DePauw University. He was elected to congress in 1894 and again elected to congress in 1898 and has been a member of that body since that time.

He is a close advisor of Speaker Cannon, and is the author of a large number of important measures, among them a bill for the federal inspection of grain.

Mr. Watson is a self-made man. In three campaigns he has spoken throughout the country, from Salt Lake City to the Atlantic ocean, and has been termed by Speaker Cannon the most eloquent man in congress.

Mr. Watson is possessed of the laudable ambition to become governor of his native state, and has given up a brilliant career in congress for the purpose of becoming a candidate for that office.

He has been a conspicuous figure in state and national politics since his first election to congress, when he defeated Representative Holman, the famous "watch-dog of the treasury," in a district that was then regarded as being hopelessly Democratic.

He has been regular with his party on all the important issues since he entered politics, and by his energy he has worked from the bottom to the position of "whip of the house," and fourth member of the ways and means committee.

When President Roosevelt decided to take a hand in the campaign in 1906 he did so by writing a long letter for publication to Mr. Watson.

His great ability as a campaigner is causing his friends to insist that he is the logical candidate for governor this year.

His record on all public questions is clean and his attitude toward labor has the unqualified indorsement of such men of national prominence as Frank Sargent, formerly grand master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and now chief of the bureau of immigration and naturalization at Washington.

Mr. Watson has the indorsement of his district, which is one of the Republican strongholds of Indiana.

NEGRO PORTERS ON J. M. & I. RAILROAD

Will Replace the White Brakemen with Colored Men on the Pennsylvania System

The Pennsylvania railroad has begun the process of replacing white brakemen on passenger trains of less than five coaches with negro porters. The change has been made on the Louisville division and soon will be extended to the other divisions, including the J. M. & I. which comes through here.

On local trains of but two or three coaches, the extra brakeman as required by the full train crew law on trains of five coaches or more, is not needed and the colored porters are being substituted.

Owls

A composition by Ernest Halterman, son of H. H. Halterman, of Orange township, and a pupil of District No. 1, Orange township, D. O. Alter teacher.

More than ten varieties of Owls have been found in Rush county, in different locations. These Owls prey upon small mammals, a few birds, fish, reptiles and insects. Eighty per cent of these Owls are nocturnal birds. They are classed under these names: The Barn Owl, the Longeared Owl, the Shorteared Owl, the Barred Owl, the Great Gray Owl, the Saw-Whet Owl, the Screech Owl and the Great Horned Owl.

Very few of these Owls build nests. generally frequenting a forsaken nest of a hawk or squirrel. The Saw-Whet Owl, the Longeared Owl, the Barred Owl, the Screech Owl and the Great Horned Owl all nest more or less in trees or cliffs.

The Great Gray Owl and the Hawk Owl nest on the limbs of trees.

The Shorteared and Snowy Owls nest on the ground. These two birds are the only diurnal Owls.

The saucy little Screech Owl is perhaps the best known of our Owls. He is very useful to the farmer. When dusk comes it leaves its place of retreat, generally hollow trees, and hunts over the fields and about the barns. It eats a large quantity of insects and mice. Sometimes it catches fish, which it does while the fish are at the breathing spaces in the ice. When nesting season comes the Screech Owl and its mate hunt a hollow tree and there make a home. Eggs, four to seven, white.

The Barred Owl is known here as the Hoot Owl.

Its food consists of mammals, birds, fish and insects. It usually hunts after nightfall. It builds its nest in hollow trees, or when these are not convenient, in deserted hawk and squirrel nests. Incubation lasts from three to four weeks. This Owl is a friend to agriculture and should be carefully protected.

The Saw-Whet Owl is the smallest of our Owls. Nearly all of its food consists of mice and insects. It gets its name through its peculiar call which sounds like someone filing a saw. Its nest is found in deserted woodpecker's holes. Eggs, three to seven, pure white.

The Longeared Owl is seldom found in Indiana. It nests in hollow trees or in caves. A very large per cent of its food consists of mice.

The Shorteared Owl is one of the few Owls that nest on the ground. Seventy-five per cent of its food consists of mice. This Owl nests in large grass tussocks in the open meadows. The nest is made of sticks and grass. Eggs, four to seven, creamy white.

The Barn Owl is common throughout the United States. It preys on mice and rats, and nests in hollow trees and cliffs and occasionally in unused buildings. Eggs, five to eleven, dead white.

The Great Gray Owl is the largest of our Owls. Accidental visitor in winter. It builds its nest in trees of sticks and feathers.

The Great Horned Owl, though not as numerous as some of our other Owls, is plentiful throughout the United States. Its food consists of poultry and game birds, mice, insects, and fish. They have been known to eat muskrats, opossums and skunks. Its nest is built in hollow trees. Eggs are white.

The Snowy Owl is a very rare visitor to this part of the State. This Owl preys on mice and occasionally a game bird. It builds its nest in a depression in a knoll, of few feathers or bits of moss. Eggs, three to ten, white.

The Hawk Owl is diurnal in habits. It feeds on mice chiefly and nests in thick growths of coniferous trees.

These Owls, that are mentioned, should be protected. Some of them eat a few chickens or game birds, but the mice, insects and other things harmful to agriculture, that they devour more than pays for the poultry.

The housecat is protected and sheltered, while every Owl that comes on the farmer's premises is shot at and driven away. The cat sometimes catches twenty chickens in a day, which is probably more than any Owl catches in its life time.

DIET OF SONG.

Bishop Fallows Prescribes It as One of Health's First Requisites.

"Singing as a regular diet is the latest addition to his prescription of 'Christian psychology' made by Bishop Samuel Fallows for his 'health club' at St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church in Chicago, says a special dispatch to the New York Herald. At the meeting the other evening he insisted that every person present should join in the first hymn.

"I want to hear every voice raised," he said. "Singing is one of the first requisites of the spirit of health. It has been recognized by neurologists as a powerful factor in mental condition and has been prescribed in cases of nervous prostration and melancholia. We should sing at every opportunity."

Harvard's New Dental School.

From a source which cannot yet be publicly announced the Harvard dental school has received promise of the funds necessary for the erection of a new building, says the Boston Transcript. The site which has been chosen is the lot at the corner of Longwood avenue and Wigglesworth street. Brookline, adjoining the property on which the buildings of the medical school stand. This lot, with a frontage of 80 feet on Longwood avenue and 223 feet in Wigglesworth street, was bought by the corporation in 1905 for $30,000. It is an excellent situation for the new building both from its convenient proximity to the medical school and because the new hospitals and other institutions which are being or are soon to be built in that section will contribute to the clinical work of the students of the dental school.

Costly Rabbit Proof Fence.

After five years' work Australia's great transcontinental rabbit proof fence has recently been completed. Its length is 2,036 miles, and the cost of its erection has been nearly $1,250,000, says the New York Tribune. It is furnished at intervals of five miles with systems of traps, in which hundreds of rabbits are captured and destroyed daily. On the eastern side of the fence the rabbits are teeming, and vegetation is almost completely absent. Inside the barrier there appears as yet no trace of their presence.

CHAPTER EIGHT

BY January the complex social mechanism of the metropolis was whirling smoothly again. The last ultra fashionable December lingerer had returned from the country. Those of the same caste outward bound for a southern or exotic winter had departed, and the glittering machine, every part assembled, refurbished, repolished and connected, having been given preliminary speed tests at the horse show and a tuning up at the opera, was now running under full velocity, and its steady, subdued whirl quickened the clattering pulse of the city, keying it to a sublimely syncopated ragtime.

It was an open winter in New York and financially a prosperous one, and that meant a brilliant social season. Three phenomena particularly characterized that metropolitan winter—the reckless rage for private gambling through the mediums of bridge and roulette; the incorporation of a company known as the Intercounty Electric company, capitalized at a figure calculated to disturb nobody and so far without any avowed specific policy other than that which served to decorate a portion of its charter which otherwise might have remained ornately and comparatively blank; the third phenomenon was the retirement from active affairs of Stanley S. Quarrier, the father of Howard Quarrier, and the election of the son to the presidency of the great Algonquin Loan and Trust company, with its network system of dependent, subsidiary and allied corporations.

The day that the newspapers gave this interesting information to the western world Leroy Mortimer, on being bluntly notified that he had overdrawn his account with the Algonquin Loan and Trust, began telephoning in every direction until he located Beverly Plank at the Saddle club, an organization of wealthy men and sufficiently exclusive not to compromise Plank's possible chances for something better. Mortimer crawled out of his hansom, saying that the desk clerk would pay, and entered the reading room, where Plank sat writing a letter.

Beverly Plank had grown stouter since he had returned to town from Black Fells, but the increase of weight was evenly distributed over his six feet odd, which made him only a trifle more ponderous and not abnormally fat. But Mortimer had become enormous. Rolls of flesh crowded his motled ear lobes outward and bulged above his collar. Cushions of it padded the backs of his hands and fingers. Shaving left his heavy, distended face congested and unpleasantly shiny. But he was as minutely groomed as ever, and he wore that satiated air of prosperity which had always been one of his most important assets.

The social campaign inaugurated by Leila Mortimer in behalf of Beverly Plank had so far received no serious reverses. His box at the horse show, of course, produced merely negative results. His box at the opera might mean something some day. His name was up at the Lenox and the Patrons. He had endowed a ward in the new pavilion of St. Berold's hospital. He had presented a fine Gainsborough, "The Countess of Wythe," to the Metropolitan museum, and it was rumored that he had consulted several bishops concerning a new chapel for that huge bastion of the citadel of faith looming above the metropolitan wilderness in the north.

Meanwhile he was doggedly docile. His huge house, facing the wintry park midway between the squat palaces of the wealthy pioneers and the outer hundreds, remained magnificently empty save for certain afternoon conferences of very solemn men, fellow directors and associates in business and financial matters—save for the periodical presence of the Mortimers.

"Things are moving all the same," said Mortimer as he entered the reading room of the Saddle club. "Quarrier and Belwether have listened more respectfully to me since they read that column about you and the bishops and that chapel business."

Plank turned his heavy head, with a disturbed glance around the room. "Can't you be careful?" he said. "There was a man here a moment ago." He picked up his unfinished letter, folded and pocketed it, touched an electric bell, and when a servant came, "Take Mr. Mortimer's order," he said, supporting his massive head on his huge hands and resting his elbow on the writing desk.

"I've got to cut out this morning bracer," said Mortimer, eying the servant with indecision, but he gave his order nevertheless and later accepted a cigar, and when the servant had returned and again retired he half emptied his tall glass, refilled it with mineral water and, settling back in the padded armchair, said: "If I manage this thing as it ought to be managed you'll go through by April. What do you think of that?"

Plank's phlegmatic features flushed. "I'm more obliged to you than I can say," he began, but Mortimer silenced him with a gesture. "Don't interrupt. I'm going to put you through the Patrons club by April. That's thirty yards through the center. D'ye see, you under-headed Dutchman? It's solid gain, and it's our ball. The Lenox will take longer. They're a 'holier-than-thou' bunch of nincompoops, and it always horrifies them to have any man elected, no matter who he is."

Plank looked out of the window, his shrewd blue eyes closing in retrospection.

"Another thing," continued Mortimer thickly, "the Kemp Ferralls are disposed to be decent. I don't mean in asking you to meet some intellectual second raters, but in doing it handsomely."

"I want to say," began Plank, speaking the more slowly because he was deeply in earnest, "that all this you are doing for me is very handsome of you, Mortimer. I'd like to say, to convey to you something of how I feel about the way you and Mrs. Mortimer—"

"Oh, Leila has done it all."

"Mrs. Mortimer is very kind, and you have been so too. I—I wish there was something, some way to—"

"To what?" asked Mortimer so bluntly that Plank flushed up and stammered:

"To be—to do a—to show my gratitude."

"How? You're scarcely in a position to do anything for us," said Mortimer, brutally staring him out of countenance.

"I know it," said Plank, the painful flush deepening.

Mortimer, frowning and growling over his cigar, was nevertheless stealthily intent on the game which had so long absorbed him. His wits, clogged, dulled by excesses, were now aroused to a sort of gross activity through the menace of necessity. At last Plank had given him an opening. He recognized his chance.

"There's one thing," he said deliberately, "that I won't stand for, and that's any vulgar misconception on your part of my friendship for you. Do you follow me?"

"I don't misunderstand it," protested Plank, angry and astonished. "I don't—"

"As though," continued Mortimer menacingly, "I were one of those needy social tipsters, one of those shabby, pandering touts who—"

"For heaven's sake, Mortimer, don't talk like that! I had no intention—"

"—one of those contemptible, parasitic leeches," persisted Mortimer, getting redder and hoarser, "who live on men like you. Confound you, Plank, what the devil do you mean by it?"

"Mortimer, are you crazy to talk to me like that?"

"No, I'm not, but you must be! I've a mind to drop the whole cursed business! I've every inclination to drop it! If you haven't horse sense enough—if you haven't innate delicacy sufficient to keep you from making such a break!"

"I didn't. It wasn't a break, Mortimer. I wouldn't have hurt you—"

"You did hurt me! How can I feel the same again? I never imagined you thought I was that sort of a social mercenary. Why, so little did I dream that you looked on our friendship in that light that I was—on my word of honor—I was just now on the point of asking you for $3,000 or $4,000 to carry me to the month's end and square my bridge balance."

"Mortimer, you must take it! You are a fool to think I meant anything by saying I wanted to show my gratitude. Look here; be decent and fair with me. I wouldn't offer you an affront—would I—even if I were a cad? I wouldn't do it now just when you're getting things into shape for me. I'm not a fool anyway. This is in deadly earnest, I tell you, Mortimer, and I'm getting angry about it. You've got to show your confidence in me. You've got to take what you want from me as you would from any friend."

There was a pause. A curious and unaccustomed sensation had silenced Mortimer, something almost akin to shame. It astonished him a little. He did not quite understand why in the very moment of success over this stolid, shrewd young man and his thrifty Dutch instincts he should feel uncomfortable. Were not his services worth something? Had he not earned at least the right to borrow from this rich man who could afford to pay for what was done for him? Why should he feel ashamed? He had not been treacherous; he really liked the fellow. Why shouldn't he take his money?

"See here, old man," said Plank, extending a huge highly colored hand, "is all square between us now?"

"I think so," muttered Mortimer. But Plank would not relinquish his hand.

"Then tell me how to draw that check! Great heaven, Mortimer, what is friendship, anyhow, if it doesn't include little matters like this—little misunderstandings like this? I'm the man to be sensitive, not you. You have been very good to me, Mortimer. I could almost wish you in a position where the only thing I possess might square something of my debt to you."

AMUSEMENTS

In making the revival of "Miss Bob White," which will appear at the Auditorium, Connersville, Saturday night Messrs. Nixon & Zimmerman have secured as many of the old cast as possible and associated with Mr. Deshon will be found J. Lee McClure as "Artie Tre Willion," Matt Hanley as the "Duke of High Titles," Joseph Leighton as "Friend Rod," William Johnson as "Jack Hearty," Lillian Burnett as "Miss Schuyler," Zillah Harris as "Miss Autumn," and Little Helen May as "Golden Rod." The prima donna role of "Claire Livingstone" (Miss Bob White) will be sung by Miss Loris Scardale, whose brilliant work as the soubrette in Spencer's opera, "Rosaline" will be well remembered. The story of "Miss Bob White" is simple but humorous and concerns the comical adventures of two young millionaires, who, to pay an election bet, clothe themselves in ragged attire and sally forth for a month's tramp in the rural districts of Pennsylvania. They are without money, that being the condition of the wager, and of course are mistaken for tramps. After many vicissitudes, their sojourn is ended and the last act finds them celebrating their return to the fashionable life at the villa of Tre Willion on the banks of the Hudson. Nixon & Zimmerman have provided a fine scenic and sartorial equipment, and have engaged a company of forty-five people to properly render the opera. The play comes to the Auditorium Saturday evening, Connersville.

Carl Herrmann, prince of violinists, to hear him and see him manipulate the bow on four common strings of a violin, will lead one to believe it was made to do anything but talk. He cannot be excelled in his rendition of various popular airs with variations. Mr. Herrmann will appear with the Durno company at the Grand Theatre, Monday night, and all lovers of classical and popular music on the violin should not miss the opportunity of hearing him.

The Grand theatre will offer a very late program of pictures and of excellent strength for tonight, tomorrow afternoon and night, entitled "The Hostage" and "Lost, Strayed or Stolen." Miss Brown will sing a new song, "Take me Around Again."

The Kramer rink will be open for skating each afternoon and night. Large crowds are attending each skate with quite a few beginners of afternoons.

Hint of Untidiness.

"If you want to study human nature just try being a salesman in a department store for even a short time," said the clerk over his evening meal. "There isn't a day but I have a quiet laugh over the remarks of customers or, more frequently, would be customers. Today, for instance, I was approached by a well dressed elderly woman with the request to show her some cups and saucers. She did not want china ones—something in porcelain, for 'common everyday use,' she said. I brought out samples, and finally her choice simmered down to a plain white and the other a white with a dull grayish green figure. As if to account for her decision she said to me in a most confidential tone: 'I guess I'll take the gray ones. They won't show the dirt so soon.'"—New York Press.

SCENE FROM "MISS BOB WHITE"

AUDITORIUM, CONNEERSVILLE, SATURDAY NIGHT

CLOSED THE INCIDENT

Mr. Fulton Said He Meant No Reflections on Arkansas.

Washington, Jan. 24.—During the debate on the urgent deficiency appropriation bill in the house, Mr. Fulton of Oklahoma spoke for half an hour on the progress of his state, which he said already outclassed many of the older states, and made an earnest plea for appropriations for federal buildings. When he arose to speak the chair referred to him as "the gentleman from Arkansas." Mr. Fulton quickly corrected him, saying: "I have been accused of many ugly things, but never before have I been accused of coming from Arkansas."

This utterance aroused the ire of Mr. Robinson of Arkansas, who sprang to the defense of his state. It was the first time, he declared, that he had heard uttered on the floor of the house a sentiment that would intentionally belittle any state in the Union. Mr. Fulton disavowed any intention to hurt anyone's feelings or to slander the state of Arkansas. He uttered the remark, he said, in the utmost good humor, and he regretted the construction which had been placed upon it. Immediately after making this statement he crossed over to where Mr. Robinson was seated, placed an arm around his shoulder and grasped his hand with the other. The act was applauded and the incident was closed.

A POLITICAL SPLIT

Further Break Reported in Michigan's Unhappy Official Family.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 24.—Governor Fred M. Warner has ordered that the hearing of the charges which he preferred against State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier of malfeasance and misfeasance in office and gross neglect of duty, must proceed regardless of the fact that Glazier has presented his resignation. He said that in resigning Mr. Glazier saw fit to deny the charges and make counter-charges against the governor, and he thought that the facts which had been shown in his (the governor's) investigation of the treasurer's department and affairs should be read into the record.

When the hearing opened Attorney General John E. Bird refused to be a party to the hearing further and withdrew, saying it was useless to try a man who has pleaded guilty. This is regarded as the final break politically between Governor Warner and Mr. Bird.

Neighbors Not Satisfied.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 24.—Following a blow with his fist, delivered by his brother-in-law, Joseph Ballenger, Albert Teeple, forty-five years old, dropped dead on the farm of Teeple's mother, near Walkerton, this county. Ballenger, aged thirty, was arrested, but afterward released by the coroner, who found that heart failure was the cause of death. An autopsy revealed that Teeple's heart was fully one-third larger than normal. The men quarreled over corn sold by Mrs. Teeple from a farm leased to Ballenger. The neighborhood is not wholly satisfied with the release of Ballenger, and may ask the grand jury to reopen the case.

Practicing Their Lines.

New York, Jan. 24.—Preparatory to the wedding of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and Count Lazalo Szechenyi of Austria, set for next Monday, there was a rehearsal of the ceremony at the Vanderbilt mansion. The marriage ceremony proper will be performed by Mgr. Lavelle with the Rev. J. J. Byrne of St. Patrick's church as master of ceremonies.

Extradition Papers Forwarded.

Mexico City, Jan. 24.—The extradition papers in the case of William F. Walker, the defaulting banker of Connecticut, have been sent to Ensenada, Lower California, by the foreign office. Walker will be given a preliminary hearing at that place shortly.

New Trial Denied.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 24.—Leo C. Thurman, the West Point (Ky.) boy convicted here of the murder, Feb. 1, 1906, of Walter P. Dolson of Michigan, his roommate, has been denied a new trial by the supreme court of Virginia and will be re-sentenced for execution.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson IV.—First Quarter, For Jan. 26, 1908.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John ii, 13-22. Memory Verses, 15, 16—Golden Text, Ps. xciii, 5—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1907, by American Press Association.]

The more I study and write the more the saying in I Pet. i, 11, grows upon me, "The Spirit of Christ testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow." This sentence is a summary of the whole Bible story, and every part has a connection with every other. We must never forget that the Spirit wrote through John in order to set forth the great truth that Jesus is the Son of God, equal with the Father; that, believing in Him, we might have life, and have it more abundantly (chapters xx, 31; x, 10). We learn how by His sufferings we become sons of God and then, by feasting on the glory, how to live as such here in these mortal bodies. In the last lesson Nathanael was told that he should see the glory, and now in the first part of this chapter we are told of our Lord's first miracle and that at the marriage in Cana He manifested forth His glory (verse 11). The marriage takes us back to Eden and to Adam and Eve and on to Rev. xix, to the marriage of the last Adam to His Eve, the church, "Then shall we see and share His glory, and His word will be to us a light such as we have never seen, and the water shall be changed into the wine of the kingdom." It will be on the third day also, counting 1,000 years as one day (Luke xii, 32). Israel will have her place in it, the names of the tribes being on the gates of the city, and then shall the Passover have its complete fulfillment in the national deliverance and conversion of Israel, according to Luke xxi, 15, 16, 28-30; Jer. xxxiii, 15, 16. The temple at Jerusalem shall be restored, according to Ezek. xl to xlviii, and the name of the city from that day shall be "the Lord is there"—Jehovah-shammah (Ezek. xlviii, 35). In the new Jerusalem which shall come down from God out of heaven, that the nations may walk in the light of it, there shall be no temple for the Lord God Almighty, and the Lamb shall be the temple of it and the light of it (Rev. xxi, 22-24). Then shall be seen the complete fulfillment of Jacob's vision. These thoughts and many more on these lines are suggested by the Passover and the temple cleansing of our lesson in John ii, which topics suggest the practical questions, Am I truly under the shelter of the blood, and, if so, am I consciously His temple? (I Cor. vi, 19.)

After this brief visit to Capernaum (verse 12), being rejected by His townsmen at Nazareth, He made Capernaum

RUSHVILLE CHURCHES SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

His center, and it is called His own city (Luke iv, 14-31; Matt. ix, 1). Capernaum, as it might be written, is the village of Nahum, or the Comforter. Let us each be a Capernaum for Him and not hinder by unbelief. It was at a Passover that He was lost to His mother for three days and when found in the temple uttered those first recorded words in Luke ii, 49, "I must be about My Father's business." The Passover of today's lesson is the first of His public ministry and is signalized by His cleansing the temple and foretelling His resurrection. That the Passover lamb typified Christ and His blood shedding is plainly stated in I Cor. v, 7. Some of the lessons are safety only under the blood, the assurance of it by the word of God, fellowship with Him in eating the lamb, a suggestion of suffering with Him in the bitter herbs and the absence of heaven the necessity of putting away all evil. As the first Passover marked the beginning of Israel's national history, the future fulfillment spoken of by our Lord at the last Passover (Luke xxii) will be marked by a deliverance that will never again be marred by a future bondage (Isa. ix, 19-22; Amos ix, 14, 15). From the beginning of their national history there was a place for God to dwell in their midst, first a tabernacle and then a temple, each typical of Jesus, their Messiah, the true tabernacle and temple. But they were ever neglecting or defiling it, for it is man's way to defile everything. In the time of the reformation under Hezekiah they were sixteen days cleansing the house of the Lord, and the filthiness had reached even to the holy place (II Chron. xxix, 5, 6, 15-18). The Lord Jesus was the only temple that never needed cleansing. We as His redeemed ones are His temples, but are urged to cleanse ourselves not only from all filthiness of the flesh, but of the spirit too (II Cor. vi, 16; vii, 1). What can be said of the buying and selling and other filthiness found in so many churches today? And is it not possible that He who looks on the heart rather than on the outward appearance sees under many an outward form of a seeming worshiper a very market place or a Wall Street.

There are deliverance and cleansing only in Him who died for us, rose again and ever liveth as our great High Priest to intercede for us. His disciples did not receive the truth concerning His resurrection until after He was risen from the dead, and some of us seem just as slow to receive Col. iii, 1-4. We know from Heb. xii, 2, that even He was sustained in His humiliation by the joy set before Him, and unless the resurrection, with all its glory, is very real to us we shall be apt to dwell much upon the way and its discouragements.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 26, 1908. By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The home mission work of our denomination; a survey.—Isa. lviii, 1-14.

Missions is the business of the church. No men or set of men engaged in business act wisely or well unless at times they take a survey of their business to discover just what is its condition and its outlook. The failure to take this wise precaution has in many instances led to ruin. Directors of banks have neglected to look into the affairs of the banking institutions which they are supposed to have in charge and have awakened suddenly to the fact that the bank has gone wrong and is insolvent and that thousands have been brought to distress and ruin. Business men following the same careless methods have often found themselves in bankruptcy when they may have thought that their business was safe and prospering. The church should conduct its business on business principles, and to do so it must at times look over its missionary enterprises, examine the true condition of affairs and strengthen the weak places and rejoice and receive new inspiration when all is found to be well.

It was in accordance with this principle that God sent Isaiah to deliver a message to His people. He had looked over the situation and found that this people were transgressing against His laws and sinning against Him. Isaiah therefore was sent with this command, "Cry aloud, lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show My people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins." The conditions were not to be lightly smoothed over, but the prophet was to deal plainly with the facts and thereby lead them back into the old paths of righteousness and of truth. A survey of our home mission fields may lead us to see anew the great needs of our country and to realize that we or our church or our society are not doing all that we could or should do in winning America and its possessions to Christ, and we can "cry aloud" and arouse new interest in the work.

A careful survey of any of our denominational home missionary work cannot but increase our zeal for home missions. Each new outlook will help us to realize what is being done and yet at the same time how much more there is to be done. The field is great indeed—millions of foreign emigrants, colored people, mountain whites, the Mexicans, Mormons, Alaskans and the masses of Americans still unsaved. Let every society make a special effort to have the work of its denomination pass before it in full review. It will stimulate interest in home missions. It will prove a blessing to the society and to its individual members in that it will bring them closer to Him who died for those for whose salvation they are working.

BIBLE READINGS. Ps. xxxiii, 12; Matt. x, 5-8; Mark i, 35-45; Luke ix, 22-40; Acts i, 8, 14, 25-28; Rom. x, 14, 15; II Cor. viii, 1-7.

A Pugnacious Super.

When F. R. Benson, the actor, was training two armies of "supers" for a battle, he had some difficulty in persuading the weaker side to submit to be conquered. Even at the first performance the vanquished force, which included a somewhat pugnacious Irishman, who may be called X., upset traditional usages by severely mauling its victors, and the play must have suffered if the hint of one of the warriors had not been taken.

"Look a-here, Mr. Benson," he said, "if you want us to be beaten, you must put X. in the other army. That's the only way."—London Standard.

Margaret's Alphabet.

Little Margaret was having difficulty with the alphabet, which was being taught her in the good old way. The letter H was a desperate pitfall. If she could not remember, so her mother said, "See, Margaret, it looks like a gate." That was an inspiration. Now Margaret is in clover. She never forgets, but this is what she says: A, b, c, d, e, f, g, gate, h, etc. Her mother sees still harder work ahead in making the little maid forget.—Washington Star.

There will be regular preaching services at the Main Street Christian church Sunday morning and evening. Bible school at 9:15 a. m.; C. E. Meeting at 6 p. m. Prof. C. E. Coleman, of Irvington will preach.

At the First Presbyterian church Sunday, Sabbath school will be held at 9:15 a. m.; Christian Endeavor at 6 p. m.; topic, "The Home Mission Work of our Denomination." This is a great subject and worthy of our thoughtful attention. There will be special music be special music at this service. An invitation by the Brotherhood is extended to all, having no church home elsewhere. Come, for here you are most welcome.

Conventioning in Brazil.

Dr. Francis E. Clark, writing about his trip of 1,000 miles in Brazil, says: "At many stations companies of Endeavorers were waiting to give us the Brazilian hug and to wish us all manner of blessings in their soft, melodious Portuguese. Some of these Endeavorers went on with us to Jahu, so that when we arrived there toward evening the convention was at once organized and was soon in full swing.

"I was much surprised to see over the door of the Presbyterian church the Christian Endeavor monogram in electric lights, red and white, and for a moment had to rub my eyes to see whether I was in North America or South America. Here is a land where half a century ago Protestantism was unknown and where a quarter of a century ago its missionaries were persecuted almost unto death, a point far back from the centers of population where now a Christian Endeavor convention could be carried on with as much enthusiasm and dignity as in Essex county (Massachusetts and New Jersey), and British Endeavorers know all about Essex.

"Here was a district convention in the heart of Brazil which attracted as much attention as any similar gathering would do in Great Britain or the United States; perhaps more. The two daily papers gave large space to it. One of them occupied almost all of its front page with the programme. The leading political leaders of both parties, though Roman Catholics, attended almost all the services, and the mayor of the city called upon us and expressed his great interest in the meetings.

"It was a genuine Christian Endeavor convention too. None of our principles or leading features was ignored or forgotten. The prayer meeting, the committees, the pledge, the interdenominational fellowship, were all made prominent, and our friends in Jahu evidently knew the spirit as well as the form of Christian Endeavor."

Where the Emphasis Is Put.

Christian Endeavor gives less emphasis to the distinctiveness of the church and more to its mission and its responsibility. It has re-embodied the vigor, and the hardihood of true apostleship and brought the church into living contact and sympathy with the ideals as well as the needs of men.

There is no sign of fatigue in this great work. The impulse of the movement is forward, and it has doubtless still a great purpose to fulfill among the evangelical churches.

The wonder is that one society with fifty members only in a little over twenty years should expand into more than 64,000 societies with nearly 4,000,000 members. There is no doubt that God's blessing is on the movement.—Home Herald.

"Action Is Education."

That famous Baptist clergyman of England, Rev. John Clifford, D. D., speaking at a recent Christian Endeavor gathering, said that the keynotes of the nineteenth century are childhood and electricity, and while the discoveries in the realm of electricity have been wonderful, yet he asserted that the discoveries of our times in regard to childhood are of far more importance. One of these discoveries, expressed in the words of Emerson, "Action is education," is a new conception of training, and Dr. Clifford assured his hearers that this new conception has been embodied in the Christian Endeavor movement and is likely to produce memorable results.

BEWARE OF PHYSIC

Only Peggavates Stomach Trouble and Never Cures.

The trouble with most people who have stomach trouble is that they do not like to take the time to get cured; they overeat and then take physic, which simply upsets the stomach and never cures.

While relief follows one or two doses of Mi-o-na stomach tablets, chronic and long-standing cases need at least two or three weeks' treatment before the sick headaches, dizzy spells, bloating, heartburn, constipation, nervousness and other symptoms that directly result from indigestion are banished never to return.

Mi-o-na is entirely different from the ordinary stomach remedies. It is taken before meals, stimulating the secretion of digestive juices and strengthening the stomach so that it can do its proper work.

With every 50-cent box of Mi-o-na Johnson's drug store give us guarantee to refund the money unless the remedy cures.

Don't miss DURNO at the Grand Theatre Monday, Jan. 27th.
